

FULL BIO | HOPE WENTZ

Hope Wentz is a pop singer/songwriter, local to the DFW Metroplex. She's also an entrepreneur and board-certified music therapist, serving children with special needs. Hope carries a zeal for childlikeness, endurance, and authenticity.

ART

Before she could speak, Hope was humming "Twinkle Twinkle Little Star," in her kitchen highchair. As she grew up listening to CCM artists like Natalie Grant and Relient K, music became one of her most valued connections to God. Hope hopped into school talent shows, singing and dancing (with sassy head-bob moves) to songs like, "Don't Look at Me" by Stacie Orrico. Hope still steps with a pep for life and loves to incorporate fun (and silly dance moves) into her music, friendships, and business.

WILD

While Hope crafted short stories, poetry, and journal entries at a very young age, she did not think to combine the two until heartbreak hit as a 21-year-old in 2013. This was the entrance of her first original song, Refining Love. She finished her first solo album, "Light Break Forth," as a live project in 2015. Hope carries a zeal for child-likeness, endurance, and authenticity. Her songs offer a disarming nature in their honest anthems, heartfelt tones, and encouraging words. Drawing from the lyrical depth and upbeat rhythms of bands like Coldplay, along with the wide vocal range of Kelly Clarkson. Hope loves to "wordsmith" songs that offer an artistic challenge. She is currently crafting a studio-produced EP entitled WILD.

Business

Hope owns and operates HeART of Hope, LLC., a creative business purposed to empower hearts with hope through music. Hope has practiced music therapy for 5 years, serving over 500 students with a variety of disabilities. Hope has also had experience supervising other music therapists, mentoring young adults, and leading other creative artists. Her unique experiences leading diverse people groups for the last 10 years have helped her develop a simple, yet rich way of communicating practical and spiritual wisdom. Whether through her music, speaking, or worship leading, Hope has a deep value to see others thrive in their calling, loved well, and empowered to love others well.

Community

Hope currently serves as the resident worship leader for AXL Creative Co., a creative community birthed out of Mercy Culture Church in Fort Worth, Texas. While she loves singing and artistry, Hope loves people more. She is passionate about seeing people empowered and encouraged through music and creativity. When she isn't working, you may find her journaling along with a cup of hot tea, exploring a new place, or playing Phase 10 with her friends.
